1. Project overview

This brief turns Chapter 1 of Snowmoon into a 3 minute 20 second anime built from twenty 10-second clips. Every clip has visual guidance, the assets it needs, narration and dialogue in Japanese with an English translation, audio notes, and a copy-paste video generation prompt.

Story in one paragraph

Gladias, a calm and thoughtful apprentice of the Order of Steering, walks through the beautifully green city of Meldan in the country of Veridia. Along the way he casts a random citizen vote on a building, attends a heavy metal concert to audit it for a social impact tax, gets exposed as an Order member, escapes with a mischievous trick, rides home, and shares a warm family dinner before an anonymous message reveals that someone knows his secret.

Important notes

- Adapted wording. All narration and dialogue here is adapted in original wording to fit 10-second pacing. It follows the story beats of the chapter but is not a word-for-word copy. Check the source if you need exact lines.
- Original lyrics. The concert lyric line in Scene 8 is a new placeholder line, not the lyrics from the chapter. Replace it with your own if you like.
- Rights. If you plan to publish or monetise the anime, confirm that you have the story author's permission first.
- Design choices. The source text does not give ages or faces for most characters. Ages, hairstyles and colours in the reference prompts are suggested designs you can change.
- Robe continuity. Gladias wears the purple privacy robe with the hood down in the early scenes (so his face reads), hood up at the concert, hood down again on the bus and at home.

Timing budget

A 10-second clip comfortably holds about 55 to 70 Japanese characters of speech at anime pace, with a natural breath between lines. Scenes that carry both narration and dialogue are kept under that budget. If a generated clip runs long, trim the narration first and keep the character lines.

3. Narration script (Japanese with English translation)

Ten narration sentences, spread across the film. The narrator is a separate audio track from the character dialogue, recorded in Japanese.

Environment reference sheet, multiview of the same city district, modern Japanese anime film style, painterly backgrounds, luminous daylight, 16:9. The district is Kalimar in Meldan, capital of Veridia: medieval-style large stone-brick houses that are perfectly clean (no dust, no dirt, no decay), each house melded seamlessly into surrounding leaves, plants and tall trees, small hanging signs for clothing, flowers and food, quiet foot paths shaded by trees, five-storey modern apartment buildings interspersed with walking paths and tiny shops, a tall soundproof barrier painted in green and blue behind a row of trees, a curving sky bridge over a busy road with cars, autobuses and small autonomous delivery vehicles, and a forested mountain in the distance with fifteen-storey apartment towers shaped like oversized medieval castle towers with many windows. Production tips

- Lock the character sheets first, then the city sheet, then generate scenes in order so you can carry visual continuity forward.
- Record the Japanese narration and dialogue first, then trim each clip to the audio, not the other way around.
- Scenes 11 to 13 form one continuous action sequence. Generate them with the same reference images and keep the crowd lighting identical.
- If a clip cannot fit all dialogue, drop the narration in that scene first (the story still reads through the visuals).
- Keep the hood-down and hood-up rule for Gladias's robe consistent across scenes.
